JOB PRINTING.

TICONOMY IN PUBLIC CONTRACTS There is nothing in the relations existing between the government of a country and the people that exempts the former from the duty of carefully and economically expending the funds entrusted to them. The government to make use of a truism, are nothing more than the servants of the public-nothing more than public agents in this respect. Like other agents they are bound to manag their principals' affairs as those principa would have done. The mere fact of those principals being the public, and of the money to be used being derived from the whole population, affords no excuse for the executive being less careful and less strict in negotiating contracts for public works than they would be in managing their own private affairs. They are bound to have the work we require done in a proper manner and at the most reasonable price. In order to do this the government cannot be too strict in their mode of letting out contracts. They cannot take too many precautions to prevent contractors taking an undue advantage of them. Merely throwing open public works to public competition is not enough. That may effect a saving to a certain extent, and so far is the proper principal to work upon. But we all know how many ways there are of running up an additional bill in the shape Governments too seem, as a general thing, to be made to pay more than private individuals. It is not thought by many for instance as gross a breach of the moral code to defraud the revenue department, or to charge the government for services never rendered as it would be were a private individual the subject of such conduct. But if a code of loose principles may induce men to look upon the government as lawful plunder, no encouragement should be given to anything leading to a waste of public monies by any laxity on the part of the Executive. This being the case, we cannot but think the system adopted in letting out the contract for the construction of bridges on the Victoria and Comax road is open to exception.

We are not aware that any fault can be found with the rate at which the work is to be done. All the bridging and crossings is to be done at so much per foot; but the number of feet of work actually necessary has not been specified. The contractor goe on building bridges and crossings where he considers they are required, and the Government foots the bill of the total number of feet of work done. A large portion of the contract has already been fulfilled. We are PORTFOLIOS, KNITTING BOXES, informed the contractor has considered it necessary in many places to do more timbering than what a disinterested judge would consider at all requisite. We would naturally expect this to be the case under the circumstances. We look upon it as the inevitable result of the Government not having let the contract according to proper specifications: Nothing would have been easier than to have sent an engineer over the ground to stake out the timbering required. The contractor would then be subject to no conflict between interest and principle. He would have his specifications to go by, and if he chose to do any more work than they called for, it would be at his own expense This may seem a little affair, but it involves a principle, and as such, requires to be looked after. If we employ a man to build us a house, we do not leave it to him to say what amount of work he shall do upon it; we fix the amount of work and agree upon the price. The Government have neither fixed the amount of work in the case in question, nor have they agreed for the total price. In both respects they have neglected the precautions of business men. . Under such circumstances we do not think the $21,825 voted for the Victoria Comax road and bridges will be expended to the best advantage-for we do not consider that sending a man to pass the work when done, will make up for neg-

The discussion was brought about by Mr. Hennessy, the member for Kings County. This gentleman, in n most able and eloquent speech, reviewed British Columbia and Victoria the whole question from the treaty of Vienna, in 1815, to the present time. The obligations of Russia, under this treaty, to deal liberally with the Poles, the subsequent recognition of that obligation by the Emperor of Russia, in an address to the Poles, in WELLS, FARGO & CO. which he specified their rights and privileges, the still subsequent violation of these For California, Oregon, Atlantic Stsage rights, in spite of the protestation of England and France, were forcibly shown. FREE AND EASIES .- An attempt was made last night by one of the Town Councillors, to fix a tax of $5 upon the proprietor of an establishment, in this city, for announcing a "Free and Easy." The mover contended that although he had never been inside (?) he supposed that the " Eminent Tragedian' spoken of, who was to assume three favorite characters, gave the entertainment the nature of a Theatre, or Concert, and the proprietor was, acordingly, liable under the ordinance. The Mayor took a very proper view of this absurd proposition. A Placard was produced which contained neither date nor signature, which contained betther date nor signature, and the Mayor asked the Council whether he could possibly fine any person upon such a paper. But we go farther, and would ask the Council whether he would be justified in inflicting a fine, even had date and name been stabled. As however, for each Veries. As long as Free and Easies con tinue to be what they profess to be—" A pub Ic room, where men assemble, without charge r entry, and take their ease-those who ar for entry, and take their ease—those who are musical, voluntarily entertaining those who are not—and are conducted with order and propriety, we don't see how they can be interfered with, either by the Civic or any other authorities. As well might an attempt other authorities. As well might an attempt be made to lax a gentleman who invites a few friends to his own house, to make themselves at home, and discourse sweet music. Because they pay their host nothing for their orders, does not alter the case. If people go into a public room, in a public house, and voluntarily call for drinks, or cigars, they expect to pay for them whatever is demanded. pect to pay for them, whatever is demanded; but they are not necessarily compelled to take anything, and, if a proprietor is extravagant in his charges, they have the option of stopping away.

WOE TO CURS !- The City Inspector has received instructions from the Town Council to collect the dog tax. All dogs hereafter found rouming about the streets without collars will be liable under City Ordinance to be destroyed, and cryy person neglecting to pay in to the City Treasury the sum of $5 for each specimen of the tribe claiming him as a master, will be liable to a penalty not exceeding $10. The Inspector is now armed with a long receipt book containing at one end a portrait of one of the canine species. We fear that there are too many of these animals roaming about pilese fate will inspitable, follow the about whose fate will inevitably follow that "When the Corporation hacks
Would insist upon the tax
Which made an end of old dog Tray."

EARLY EXCITEMENT .- The arrival of the steamer Eliza Anderson yesterday, although it took place at the early hour of 6 a. m. produced quite an excitement on Brodrick's wharf, It was well known that the 'man Williamson was expected to arrive by her, and a large concourse of people assembled at the first sound of her whistle, in anxious expectation of gratilying themselves with a sight of the prisoner. When Williamson appeared he was heavily shackled and walked with difficulty. The colored members of the community were in great force, and many followed him to the police station, addressing observations on the way, that were anything but comforting to the unhappy man.

PROSPECTUS.-We have received from a new company projected by him, to be styled the Victoria Omnibus Railway Company (lim.) with a proposed capital of $600,000. Mr. Varieus has accompanied his prospectus with a statement of the probable cost of the undertaking, the expense of working it, and the estimated return through passenger and godstraffic: from which he deduces a return g adstraffic: from which he deduces a return of 6 per cent. per month on the outlay. GETTING OUT A MONUMENT-FEASTING. As soon as I was upon my legs again the old man started off across the straits to get a large tree to make a monument for one of his tillicums who was killed some time before. It took two of them only three days to knock the tree down and cut the log off; they had good Collin's axes with them at that.

On the morning following there On the morning following there was a grand turnout of canoes to tow the stick across; they were not long about it. I could see no difference in their going or coming, they just snaked the stick along. When they came near the landing I thought the old man would go crazy—the way he jumped and is ared was wonderful—I suppose it was one of their ceremonies which I knew nothing about.

In a short time the house was filled with braves and squaws, I could see they wereon for a grand spree, they rolled out a barrl col Hudson's Bay rum and three cases of brandy.

No time was lost in talk, for they set right to work serving the liquor out by the dipper full. I noticed the most of them had bottles with them, and when they got pretty well filled up themselves, they commenced filling up their bottles. Still there were some old stages a ways they who dishipul now the stages are some than the dishipul new terms. tagers amongst them who disdained appar stagers amongst them who disdained appar-ently to carry any away, except what they imbibed in a legitimate way. They were not long in getting through with all the liquor. The assembly then broke up all being very orderly except a few of the old bummers who wanted to see if there was any of the stiff left, but they were disappointed. The old man did not trouble himself much with relief the stiff for presently there with rolling the stick, for presently there was a very high tide accompanied with a south east wind, which enabled them to get the timber to the place they wanted it. One of the Siwashes went to work on it, and after two weeks labor he had the stick worked into a most beautiful article, which see into a most beautiful cylinder, which considering the tools he had to work with was not so very bad. A few days ago they had a grand dance in the house to celebrate the finishing of the stick. The way they dressed themselves out astonished me. No one can have any concenting of the avenue of good have any conception of the amount of good clothes they have, I suppose they must have been all stolen at Victoria or somewhere elso. They had among it also plenty of slop clothing, a man could easily detect the difference between the two. The only dancing I could see was a mone the source who ing I could see was among the squaws who stood round against the walls of the house bobbing their heads in time to a song the mer sang. The latter were all stationed in the center of the house. The only accompaniment they had was a big wooden drum, most of the men also beat time with sticks. In all it was a sight worth seeing. They were all well dressed and painted, in fact, it was a far betthe turnout than ever I expected to see in the place. I may as well mention they wanted to make a swell of me; that morning they had a dress -coat belonging to the Royal Marines for my especial use. I never knew previous to that they had blacking in the ranch, but sure enough my boots were blacked over night, they had a c'ean suit of clothes for me from socks up. I put on everything but the marines coat, that a kind of got me. After the stick was finished, they had to cut a bird of some sort to put on top of it, it is now (Dec. 7th) finished, and is something between the engle and the forsomething between the eagle and the froz, the after part of it certainly resembles the frog, but the head is a very good representation of the eagle. Ou the whole it is a very good piece of work to be done altogether with the eye—the lines on each side are as

The fashions here are very strange. They go very heavy on the culfus pollatch, but they carry it out well with one another There is not a day passes but three or four pollatches come into the house, consisting of salmon, berries, grease, dried sea weed, etc I myself have had several pottatches given me—such as salmon, two blankets, shot-

You must take no notice of the party who gives you the things at the time they are presented to you. Afterwards, if you like to acknowledge it, it is all right. Our old man acknowledge it, it is all right. Our old man gave a muck a muck polluch the other day. The house being only forty by thirty feet was too small to accommodate all his tillicums, so the grub was moved to the second house above, which was much, larger. The grub consisted principally of berries and grease with a barrel of molasses to sweeten it. I had an invitation to go so I went It was had an invitation to go, so I went. It was a great sight. I suppose there were over a hundred and fifty men and women, to say nothing of youngsters—they filled up the holes and corners. There was no time lost. The barrel of molasses was tapped, and they poured something like a gallon or more into a pan. They intimated to me that it was my share of the least. A lenass man fisted the pan and bore it home. The day after I was at one of their drinking bents. The old man would take no denial to his invitation, so I had to go. When I got there the house was chock full as usual. There was a deal of dancing by a young squaw and a little boy; both in very fantastic diesses. When that was through with, the doctor then stept out and making his way into a corner of the house sung out in a very loud voice. He listened very intently for a few seconds, but receiving no response, he left and went to another corner, and so on, till he had been round the house. At the fourth corner he got an answer in a kind of a whistle. Everybody looked intensely astonished, and on his lifting up a covering of blankets, a figure was lying underneath with a most villainous false face on him; he made no motion whatever. Then up struck the drum, and off they all went in a struck the drum, and on they are very lively song, and during the performance the figure disappeared. After that the drinking began, and it was well carried out.

drinking began, and it was well carried out. Blankets and calicoes were torn up and given away. I got two pieces of calico. As usual, a large amount of liquer was drank, and a good many of them had bottlesfull to pack home with them.

During this time my old man was getting ready to place his big stick on end, and also make a grand potlatch. The night before the stick was to go up, the old man had to dance, in order not to lose time the next day, as they would have their hands full for one day in getting the stick on end, and making the in getting the stick on end, and making the grand potlatch. During the day everything grand pollatch. During the day everything was cleared away to make room for the crowd that was to assemble at night. And sure enough all the room was needed. The house was filled to overflowing. The old man was dressed in a splendid Indian robe and a pair of fancy leggings; the latter were ornamented with beers' claws, to serve also as rattles. The festal music, of course, was as rattics. The restai music, of course, was the drum, and a song. The duncing was a sort of figuring about and lasted over an hour. During that time, however, we had a great many different songs and dances. They then commenced one of their long trateas when it was interrupted by four sivashes bursting into the house, attired and painted in the most fanciful style. A lively song was struck up, and off they went again to dance. That dance was by far the best I have seen That dance was by far the best I have seen among them. The next morning it was wet, raw and cold, but still they were around and ready for work. They had a sert of a derrick with a tackle, but the heaviest of the work was done by falr lifting. It took them half a day to do the job. Then the grand politath commenced. One man got 40 blankets, another an Indian sobe worth 30 blancets. A good many got as many as five and six. The old man also gave away nearly all the clothes he had, hesides axes, muskets, shot, powder, &c. Everybody got something. Nor was he the only one that pottatched; all his friends seemed to be crazy on the subset. How would not be considered.

blaukets change hands. As more minored blaukets change hands. A most miscrable dirty loking old squaw whom I never thought had a single thing but what she always wore, gave away no less than seventy three point blankets. I was very sorry to see the Indian robe go because I intended to have it myself.

CENTLEMEN,—YOU WILL SHORTLY BE Called upon to exercise the most sacred rights of Britons, in selecting men of your own free will to manage your own local sfisies, scrutinize and correct the course of Government, and adjust and impose taxation. While I feel that I have no especial claims to public support, I do claim, in common with my fellow citizens, that I have embarked my capital, brought my family, and expended some portion of my past energies here; and that in a new country like this I have a right to aspire to a position in the mangement of its public affairs. I do not seek any office of emolument—I have never done so, nor is such my aim now. I am content to earn my living independent of Grown patronsge; but the honor of reprecenting my fellow citizens is a distinction which any man might be proud of, and I sapire to that. I hold the equal rights of all men to be of

with his neighbor, and for such principles I will always contend.

Heaven has given us a fine climate, a good barbor, a natural position as the entrepot to a great part of Washington Territory and British Columbia; and in the present condition of American affairs so situated that with a Frare Port and Mo DERT of any smount, we can supply a great share of the Pacinic coast cheaper than they can possibly be supplied from elsewhere.

I am fully alive to the advantages we possess and it is my anxious desire to forward our interests, particularly railroad and harbor enterprises; to watch and guard against corruption and misgorerment; to see that equal rights and cheap administration are preserved; that law costs and lawyers are looked after, without permitting to them exclusive privileges or business monopolies; that the merchant, tradesman, mechanic and artisan is protected and supported; land granted free, or at abolished.

There are many other public questions of great importance upon which I will speak hereafter, as they cannot be referred to within the limits of this address, but if you see fit to honor me with your confidence and support, you may rely that for neither inducements of office or patronage, no printing or other jobs will pass without exposure. And should it not be your pleasure to elect me, I will support cheerfully whomsoever you think fit oclect, so long as they follow a line of policy similar to that I have here laid down.

I have the knonr to be Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
EDWARD BEATTY EARLES.
